

"Information that Works!"

CFD PRESS RELEASE

Matthew McHargue has received the designation of Certified Faculty Developer, or CFD, by the Learning Resources Network (LERN), an international association in lifelong learning.

The CFD exam was passed in April 2019. By passing the CFD exam, Matthew has demonstrated knowledge in the ten key areas of expertise.

CFD's receive a gold medallion, pin and a framed certificate. Matthew's accomplishment will be recognized at LERN's Annual Conference next November in San Diego, CA.

"The CFD designation is a standard of achievement in the knowledge and understanding of faculty development," noted LERN President William Draves. "By becoming a Certified Faculty Developer, Matthew has helped to professionalize the field of educational programming."

LERN was founded in 1974 and has over 4,500 members. With a staff of 10, LERN provides "Information That Works!" to over 10,000 providers of lifelong learning a year.
